

Problem Statement:

Our users would be at home on campus annoyed at having to walk all the way to Russel house to pick up their food and wait in line. Instead, our app connects them with students already walking through campus that could grab their food for them.

Who: Students at the university of south carolina who suffer under the tyrannical march of time as they must go to russell house and wait in line at the food stands to wait for their food.

What: An app that links students that are walking between classes to restaurants on or near campus that they will walk by so that they can pick up the food and deliver it to a student that is on the way to their classes.

Where: At the University of South carolina.

Why: Students need to maximize their time studying at home or around campus for classes and russell house literally sucks the life out of us as we are forced to go to that hell hole to obtain food on a daily basis
